

Comparing Land Uses and Codes in 1965 SLUCM to 1987 SIC and 1999 NAICS

This document compares the 1965 SLUCM codes to the 1987 SIC and the 1999 NAICS codes. The primary purpose of this table is to find the closest SIC and NAICS codes for a given SLUCM category or code. Existing databases may also incorporate this lookup table to convert or update local land-use codes that have been migrated from SIC to NAICS. Each SLUCM code shows the corresponding SIC code(s) and every SIC code in turn is matched with one or more NAICS code(s). Also in the table are those SLUCM codes that do not have a corresponding SIC or NAICS codes. Many SLUCM classes, such as household units, parks, street and highway right-of-ways, and vacant floor area have no SIC or NAICS equivalents.

Before matching SLUCM to SIC, we had to first convert the 1967 SIC codes that appear in SLUCM to the 1987 SIC using standard lookup tables developed by the U.S. Department of Commerce. Because SIC groupings have undergone significant changes in 1972 and 1987 and many industry groups were split or combined, these method resulted in several possible matches for a single SLUCM code; many at different levels of the SIC hierarchy. An accurate matching should therefore contain many sets of SIC and NAICS codes under each SLUCM entry. However, to make the tables readable we just picked whichever SIC was at the broadest level. When we had more than one code at the broadest level (especially in the services sector), we just picked the first one.

For SIC to NAICS, we used the comparison tables published by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. These tables match every (relevant) SIC code to a corresponding NAICS code. Like the SLUCM to SIC matching problems, SLUCM to NAICS do not always result in precise matches. They have been rounded to the nearest industry group or sector. That is why some NAICS codes in this table appear rounded to the next higher level even when SLUCM codes (for certain business types) may have a counterpart in NAICS at the 6-digit level. For exact matching, download complete files from the web site at <http://www.planning.org/lbcs>.
